SEEKING THE ANSWERS

One of the fascinating things about life is the constant realization, among intelligent people, that few arguments and issues are ever black and white, and that few final conclusions or rules can be laid down in blanket fashion to cover a mass portion of the population on any major question.

In talking with others, if you will note their readiness to be positive about their statements, or their conclusions, you can usually determine the depth of their philosophy and the amount of wisdom they have acquired over the years. Those who always feel sure they have the answers are most often the ones who are actually bewildered and in need of further enlightenment.

Likewise, those who should make an effort to improve their minds, and add to their knowledge and education, are often the ones who are completely content never to read worthwhile books, look over the news intelligently, or try to draw conclusions of their own.

Admittedly, we live in a complex world, and it is hard to know who is telling the truth, who really knows the score, what to read and where can to find it. A general approach which might be of value to readers is that which includes keeping up with the news by devoting a few minutes each day to a newspaper, listening several news commentators, with different political philosophies, and reading a stimulating book every month or two. Then, weigh all the opinions and arguments, think for yourself and make your own decisions.

THE FOOTBALL SONG

The football season is with us again, and it has more spirit and excitement, perhaps, than any other sports season. And so, as we enjoy the games this fall, we will hear the same old football song, over and over again.

We are not referring to the marching song or the alma mater of any college. We are referring to the song of the coach, which is now universal the world over. It goes like this:

"Well, we can't possibly do as well as we did last season. We've lost eight good tackles, fourteen top guards sixteen great back and thirty-four assistant coaches. No, we can't expect to do as well as last season.

"The opposition? It'll be stronger Coach Jones at State is loaded with talent. That line is terrific. And that Bob Smith, the quarterback can do anything. All the teams in the conference looks to be stronger it's going to be a rough season, for all right. We'll be lucky to be fielding a team at all by the end of the season."

Despite this weeping, of course, the coach quoted above goes on to win most of his games, probably, with a fine crop of talent.

But this is the story, among coaches, the nation over. And one can understand why, when he realizes the sudden deaths with which a football coach constantly flirts, so far as his job is concerned, in most cases.

The glamor campaigns, by the publicity departments of the various colleges and universities, is another phase of the annual fall fever. These publicity departments are trying to make some selected favorite an All-American.

It all adds up to a sport that is peculiarly American, a sport that we associate with cool weather falling leaves school and the coming of winter. In many ways football, a professional sport in our educational institutions, is the most exciting of U. S. field sports.

The season doesn't last long. When it is over, and basketball is over, the worst sports lull of the year follows.

The fall, the football season, is actually the height of the sports season in the United States. It brings us the World Series, football and every other sport. It is a time of year to be enjoyed to the fullest.

KNOW THE WEATHER

BY E. H. SIMS

When is the hurricane season? Why do hurricanes assail the coast almost exclusively? Has the main track of these tropical-bred storms been changing course in recent years?

Hurricanes are probable beginning in late summer - but sometimes brew in mid-summer. They are unlikely after November. These massive low - pressure circular storms usually originate in the Gulf of Mexico or Caribbean in this part of the world.

They move to the north and finally to the northeast and blow themselves out in the higher latitudes. Because they almost always drift to the east, in the end, and do not originate over Mexico or seldom off Mexico's west coast, the western and central states do not have to experience them.

Upper middle states, such as Wisconsin, Michigan and Minnesota, are protected by their geographical position and the distance of land between them and the Gulf. Hurricanes somehow wear themselves out over long stretches of land.

It's true these storms seem to be moving northward in recent years, though it is too early to determine whether this trend will continue. They are most dangerous along the coast, where they can push masses of ocean water over the shoreline, and this - with better than 100 mile-an-hour winds produce a major disaster. A storm is said to be a hurricane when its winds exceed 75 m. p. h.

FIVE COUNTY FAIR

Once again, it's Fair time, a golden opportunity for 4-H members to exhibit some of their work done in the past year. Every 4-H project can be exhibited some way this year. A few suggestions about making some exhibits:

Poultry - select large, healthy, alert birds that have proper shape and desired plumage, birds that matured early, are full feathered and well fleshed. Birds uniform in size and color. Try to select birds that look as nearly alike as possible. The bird in your exhibit should also show good production qualities. Besides having a deep breast, a broad back, and a long straight breast bones, they should also have a well-balanced, rugged, refined head, a lean clear-cut face, bright alert eyes and a red comb and wattles. Don't exhibit a bird with a broken back, a deformed beak, or a twisted wing, or falling feathers. Be sure white birds are cleaned. Wash the feet, leg and head part of all birds. Rub the feet, legs after cleaned, with a woolen cloth moistened with linseed, cottonseed, or sweet oil.

Garden Produce - requirments for the best marketable size for vegetables should be carefully observed. Unusual sizes have no place in an exhibition except in oddities classes or as a decoration. Vegetables in exhibits should be in the best eatings stage for the local market. Exhibit should be fresh as possible under the conditions.

Exhibit should be cleaned and properly trimmed - care should be taken when cleaning vegetables, as acceptable kitchen methods sometimes injure vegetables for display purpose. Proper trimming adds much to marketing catalog qualities.

The Extension agent will pick up exhibits for the Five County Fair, Monday morning, September 11, 1961, at the ... county agent's office, Elementary School, ... School. Very ... exhibits at these ... M.
